Course Details

Credit Points 6

Summary of the Course

This course is intended to serve as an introduction to the evolution of Chinese cinema in its cultural, literary and historical context. You will explore issues related to "modernization", communism, nationalism, cultural conflict, war, revolution and gender roles against a backdrop of Chinese history and politics provided in class via lecture, readings and discussion.

This course is taught in English and with readings in English.

Course Learning Outcomes

1. Analyse selected films of the modern and contemporary Chinese historical periods.
2. Articulate a basic understanding of major historical events in recent Chinese history.
3. Analyse literary texts of the modern and contemporary periods, on which filmic adaptations are based, through close comparative reading.
4. Display reflective and critical thinking skills and apply these to essay writing.

Teaching Strategies

Lectures will precede the viewing of segments of films, which will be followed by class discussions on the film and readings. This is a Chinese Studies course taught in English with readings in English. No knowledge of the Chinese language or background in Chinese history is required. Lectures and readings will provide a cultural and historical framework in which we will view films and clips from films together with a critical eye toward their technique, effect and societal critique. The course has a multiple-focus: viewing Chinese films, reading works of Chinese literature, film history and politics and then writing an essay based on questions related to the films. Lectures and in-class discussions, as well as this multi-media approach, are crucial to the course. It is important to come to each class having completed the readings assigned for each week. This will prepare you for class discussions and accurate note-taking in class. If you miss a class, it is your responsibility to view the film in the library and listen to the recorded lecture and discussion for that week. Because this is a film course, film viewing and study of the course reader are essential for both the essay and the final exam, which will be given during final exam period. Attendance is compulsory, even though lectures will be recorded and made available electronically. Live classroom discussion is an irreplaceable component in a university learning environment, one which is both stimulating and rewarding to your intellectual development.

Assessment

Assessment Tasks

Assessment task	Weight	Due Date	Student Learning Outcomes Assessed
Essay	55%	16/4/2021 (in week 9)	1, 3, 4
Exam	45%	Formal Exam Period	1, 2, 4

Assessment Details

Assessment 1: Essay

Length: 2500 words if in English; 4000 characters if in Chinese

Details:

Students are permitted to write the essay in either English (approx. 2500 words) or Chinese (approx. 4000 Chinese characters). I suggest that you argue a position on one or more questions about one or a group of films viewed in this course. The question/theme may be derived from the discussion questions in the course outline, from those in the course reader, or from the “suggested essay topics” in the course outline. You may also devise your own topic, such as one focusing on women’s issues in the films, the achievements/failings of the Chinese revolution as seen through the films, etc. I am most interested in your own views and your own arguments, substantiated by evidence in the films and readings we have covered, and/or by outside research, for which you should provide citations, either in the text of your essay (Harvard style) or in footnotes (Chicago style), even if these are taken from a Chinese source. Feedback via individual comments.

Additional details:

If you chose to write in Chinese, references should be given just as they would be were you writing in English. You may use Harvard style (in-text references with a bibliography attached at the end) or Chicago style (footnotes). You do not need to translate titles of English books, articles or reference materials into Chinese if writing in Chinese, just cite their original titles in English. The same holds true for quotations from English-language sources: you need not translate them into Chinese, you can cite them directly in English. If you are writing in English, you may also cite Chinese-language sources in the original language.

Turnitin setting: This assignment is submitted through Turnitin and students can see Turnitin similarity reports.

Assessment 2: Exam

Length: Two hours

Details:

Students complete an exam (ca. 2 hours) including 20-30 multiple choice questions (weighting 80%) and an essay of approx. 500 words in English or 800 Chinese characters (weighting 20%). Students receive a mark and can consult the lecturer for further feedback. This is the final assessment for attendance purposes.

Additional details:

The date and time of exams are decided and centrally timetabled by the University.

Turnitin setting: This is not a Turnitin assignment

Attendance Requirements

Attendance of Lectures/Tutorials is mandatory in this course. Unexcused absence from more than 20% of Lectures/Tutorials will result in the award of a fail grade. In Lectures/Tutorials you will actively engage with core course content, enabling you to attain CLO 1,2,3,4. Students will have to submit written evidence of attendance at every lecture and tutorial.

Resources

Prescribed Resources

- Other – ARTS2453 Chinese Cinema Reader Photocopied materials will be sold as a course reader at the UNSW Bookshop in week 2. It is advisable that you purchase one for your own convenience, as it is the textbook for this course. The course readings can also be accessed through Moodle.

Recommended Resources

Some Suggested Topics for the Essay (you do not need any special permission to write on these topics):

Topics may be gleaned from the discussion questions on the syllabus (course outline) or in the course reader. In the past, students without advanced backgrounds in Chinese Studies have written impressive original essays on some of the following topics, which you may use if you like:

What different images of women have you seen in the various films this semester? How do they differ and why? What is the significance of this difference?

Regarding Zhu Fu (The New Year Sacrifice), make a comparison of the 1956 film with the 1924 story by Lu Xun (1881-1936) on which it is based. What are the major differences? Where has the role of the intellectual gone in the film? Why? Are different images of women portrayed in the film as compared to the story? If so, why?

How does Zhu Fu (The New Year Sacrifice) contrast with Zao chun er yue (Early Spring in the Second Lunar Month)? Are they films of different periods? Does this call into question the characterization that “the first 17 years of the PRC” ought to be considered one period in the history of Chinese film?

Is the film Cuo wei (Displacement) more a science fiction film or more a film that comments on Chinese reality? What are your reasons for saying so?

Does the film Huang tudi (Yellow Earth) offer a critique of the Communist revolution? If so where and how?

Is Ju Dou a film about generational conflict, gender roles, or do you see this film as containing national allegory? If so, where is the allegory and how does it function? If the allegorical approach is no longer valid, then what other themes might we see in the film?

How does Lanse de fengzheng (The Blue Kite) differ from Huo zhe (To Live) in its approach to re-telling recent Chinese history? Which film is more effective in your own view and why?

How do the films we have viewed reflect differing assessments of the Chinese revolution?

How are women’s issues dealt with in the various films?

What are the conflicting assessments of the Maoist political line in the Cultural Revolution as depicted in Furong zhen (Hibiscus Town) and Jue lie (Breaking with Old Ideas)? Which film is more effective in pressing its case and why?

What is expected in the essay?

You may write the essay in either English (approx. 2500 words) or Chinese (approx. 4000 characters). We suggest that you argue a position on one or more questions about one or a group of films viewed in this course. The question/theme may come from the discussion questions on this syllabus, or from those in the course reader. It may be one that you devise, such as focusing on women's issues in the films, the achievements/failings of the Chinese revolution as seen through the films, etc. We are most interested in your own views. By no means should you go online and randomly download material from websites. Everything quoted from books, journals or websites must be marked by quotation marks (" ") or indented as a block. If outside sources are used, the sources used should be cited in the text of your essay (Harvard style) or as footnotes (Chicago style). The same holds for essays written in Chinese. Do not attempt to defeat the anti-plagiarism software by copying texts from Baidu. They will be detected just the same.

IMPORTANT: You should hand in the essay electronically through Moodle.

Submission of Assessment Tasks

Turnitin Submission

If you encounter a problem when attempting to submit your assignment through Turnitin, please telephone External Support on 9385 3331 or email them on externalteltsupport@unsw.edu.au. Support hours are 8:00am – 10:00pm on weekdays and 9:00am – 5:00pm on weekends (365 days a year). If you are unable to submit your assignment due to a fault with Turnitin you may apply for an extension, but you must retain your ticket number from External Support (along with any other relevant documents) to include as evidence to support your extension application. If you email External Support you will automatically receive a ticket number, but if you telephone you will need to specifically ask for one. Turnitin also provides updates on their system status on Twitter.

Generally, assessment tasks must be submitted electronically via either Turnitin or a Moodle assignment. In instances where this is not possible, it will be stated on your course's Moodle site with alternative submission details.

Academic Honesty and Plagiarism

Plagiarism is using the words or ideas of others and presenting them as your own. It can take many forms, from deliberate cheating to accidentally copying from a source without acknowledgement.

UNSW groups plagiarism into the following categories:

Copying: using the same or very similar words to the original text or idea without acknowledging the source or using quotation marks. This also applies to images, art and design projects, as well as presentations where someone presents another's ideas or words without credit.

Inappropriate paraphrasing: Changing a few words and phrases while mostly retaining the original structure and/or progression of ideas of the original, and information without acknowledgement. This also applies in presentations where someone paraphrases another's ideas or words without credit and to piecing together quotes and paraphrases into a new whole, without appropriate referencing.

Collusion: working with others but passing off the work as a person's individual work. Collusion also includes providing your work to another student before the due date, or for the purpose of them plagiarising at any time, paying another person to perform an academic task, stealing or acquiring another person's academic work and copying it, offering to complete another person's work or seeking payment for completing academic work.

Inappropriate citation: Citing sources which have not been read, without acknowledging the "secondary" source from which knowledge of them has been obtained.

Duplication ("self-plagiarism"): submitting your own work, in whole or in part, where it has previously been prepared or submitted for another assessment or course at UNSW or another university.

Correct referencing practices:

- Paraphrasing, summarising, essay writing and time management
- Appropriate use of and attribution for a range of materials including text, images, formulae and concepts.

Individual assistance is available on request from The Learning Centre (<http://www.lc.unsw.edu.au/>). Students are also reminded that careful time management is an important part of study and one of the identified causes of plagiarism is poor time management. Students should allow sufficient time for research, drafting and proper referencing of sources in preparing all assessment items.

UNSW Library also has the ELISE tool available to assist you with your study at UNSW. ELISE is designed to introduce new students to studying at UNSW but it can also be a great refresher during your study.

Completing the ELISE tutorial and quiz will enable you to:

- analyse topics, plan responses and organise research for academic writing and other assessment tasks
- effectively and efficiently find appropriate information sources and evaluate relevance to your needs
- use and manage information effectively to accomplish a specific purpose
- better manage your time

- understand your rights and responsibilities as a student at UNSW
- be aware of plagiarism, copyright, UNSW Student Code of Conduct and Acceptable Use of UNSW ICT Resources Policy
- be aware of the standards of behaviour expected of everyone in the UNSW community
- locate services and information about UNSW and UNSW Library

Some of these areas will be familiar to you, others will be new. Gaining a solid understanding of all the related aspects of ELISE will help you make the most of your studies at UNSW.
