

Australia's
Global University

Refugee women:
Key to the Global Compact
on Refugees

UNSW
Forced Migration
Research Network

COMMUNITY CONSULTATIONS USING RECIPROCAL RESEARCH: Session 1: Getting to Know you

- Who are we and why are we here?
- Aims of this training
- How information shared in this training will be used
- Group introductions

This course is a “Training of Trainers”

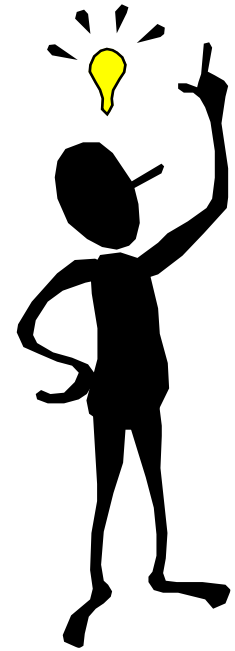

You may use the materials to learn new ways of conducting community consultations

You may use the materials to teach others how to do this.

In the course we will explore ways in which we can:

- Run successful consultations with communities
- Provide safe spaces for discussing difficult issues
- Draw on community capabilities, knowledge and expertise

The methodology is flexible and adaptable.

The materials have been designed so that you can adapt them to suit your own needs.

It is designed to be used with people from diverse backgrounds and educational attainment.

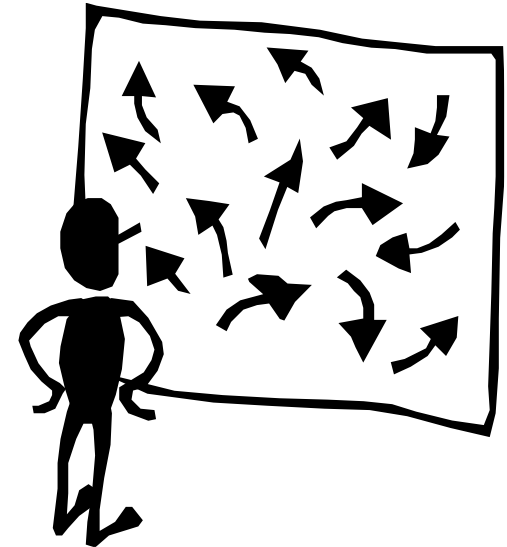

It can be used with interpreters and with large groups.

The DVD is useful to show participants in consultations what you are hoping to achieve.

What do participants want to learn from this training course?

Why are people taking part in this consultation?

Being clear about:

- a. why the Consultation is taking place
- b. deciding with participants how the information collected will be used