Justice Inclusion Access

Building an equitable future for women from forced migration backgrounds.

JEINA creates pathways to education, employment, leadership, and entrepreneurship for women from forced-migration backgrounds – advancing UNSW's commitment to Progress for All.

JEINA defines forced migrants as people displaced from their homelands by circumstances beyond their control. We recognise that women from forced-migration backgrounds often face intersecting barriers to opportunity, participation, and belonging as they rebuild their lives.

JEINA Entrepreneur's Hub

Entrepreneurship and mentorship shaped by lived experience

Impact X: Health Diversity Pre-Accelerator is a program delivered by UNSW Founders in partnership with, JEINA, The George Institute for Global Health and Investment NSW. The program supports diverse and underrepresented founders to develop innovations that address real community needs.

Impact X at a glance

- > 10-week pre-accelerator program
- > Focus on health innovation
- > Expert mentorship and practical support
- > Funding and scholarship opportunities
- > Community-driven solutions with real-world impact

Through its partnership with Impact X, JEINA support women from forced-migration backgrounds in our communities to build skills, expand networks, access funding, and turn innovative ideas into meaningful impact.

Beyond Impact X

JEINA Entrepreneur's Hub supports UNSW women students and early-career researchers from forced-migration backgrounds through scholarships, mentoring, industry placements, and entrepreneurship programs. These opportunities build skills, confidence, and networks, empowering women to pursue their ambitions and thrive as leaders, innovators, and changemakers.

Stories of impact

Gita's story

Gita's story reflects the resilience, creativity, and leadership that JEINA seeks to support.

As a mid-career migrant woman, Gita rewrote her own story – transitioning from biomedical research to founding Red Blood Comic, a social enterprise that makes health information accessible to children, families, and vulnerable communities.

In 2025, Gita completed the Impact X program and received a scholarship from The George Institute for Global Health.

Her journey demonstrates how education, mentorship, and opportunity can unlock new possibilities, proving that careers can be shaped by resilience, reinvention, and ambition.

"The entrepreneurial journey is hard, harder for women, and even harder for migrants. But I won't let that stop me from pursuing my dream."

– Gita
