Since 2019, the UNSW Tax Clinic has provided independent, free and confidential tax advice for individuals and small business owners in severe financial distress. UNSW Tax Clinic strives to contribute to a more just society by addressing deeper systemic injustices at the frontline and engaging directly with the community services sector through warm referrals.

We also aim to identify otherwise unmet needs in our clients and support them through cross-referrals with social workers, mental health support workers, financial counsellors and pro bono lawyers.

A teaching clinic, UNSW Tax Clinic operates as an integrated work-integrated-learning space. This gives enrolled students an opportunity to work alongside tax professionals to help our client base while developing their technical and professional skills in delivering high-quality tax advice. We also offer volunteering opportunities to students from faculties across the university.

We also have a bold agenda for grassroots research on systemic issues faced by financially vulnerable individuals and small business.
Director’s Welcome

UNSW Tax Clinic’s second year was marked with both unexpected challenges and unprecedented opportunities.

Building on the foundations we established in 2019, we developed our engagement with the social impact ecosystem and continued making the case through grassroots findings and research that tax justice has significant flow-on effects for society at large.

I am grateful for the time, dedication and support of every member of our team.

Our Clinic Supervisors adapted remarkably to the shift in both student and client engagement given the COVID pandemic restrictions. They provided free, confidential and independent tax advice to our clients – who are often in serious financial hardship and who approach us with very complex needs. Without their generosity and professionalism, these clients would not have had access to much-needed tax advice.

Together with our work-integrated-learning students, student volunteers and pro bono volunteers, we supported around 100 clients and delivered training to around a third of the financial counselling sector.

We are also thankful to our community sector referral partners (ranging from financial counsellors, crisis support services, domestic violence support services, pro bono legal clinics and community centres). It is thanks to their referrals that we are able to identify and assist the most financially vulnerable people across NSW.

Our Team

Ann Kayis-Kumar (Director)
Michael Walpole (Co-Founder)
Gordon Mackenzie (Co-Founder)
Paul Viola (Clinic Supervisor)
Helen Lam (Clinic Supervisor)
Maree Magafas (School Manager)
Lydia McDonnell (Clinic Officer)
Sandra Cahill (Clinic Officer)

Our Pro Bono Volunteers, Enrolled Students and Student Volunteers are also an integral part of our vision – and our team.

We are incredibly grateful for the generous support provided by our industry partners; PwC and KPMG, and for the generous time and support of our pro bono volunteers. Thanks especially to the following supporters and Pro Bono Volunteers (in alphabetical order):

TABL3033/5933 – UNSW Tax Clinic’s Work Integrated Learning Course

TABL3033/5933 offers Business School students an unique opportunity to undertake work for real clients and have opportunities to analyse the effect of the tax system in practice.

The course comprises both a clinical component (1 full day per week) and a skills-based webinar component (1.5 hours per fortnight). Under supervision from Clinic Supervisors, our students help clients with their tax problems, design and deliver community rights-based education initiatives, and assist with research and advocacy to address systemic injustice within the tax-transfer system.

A huge thank you to our Enrolled Students and Student Volunteers (in alphabetical order):

In 2020, our clinic served 133 financially vulnerable clients with over 1,500 hours of free tax advice delivered by CA/CPA-qualified registered tax agents.

Our community-led approach serves people in financial hardship across NSW by partnering with the community sector (financial counsellors, crisis support, domestic violence support, pro-bono legal clinics) to identify and support clients who would otherwise not have access to tax advice.

2020 Client Quotes:

“My most sincere thanks to [your team] for the assistance you have to me during a really difficult time in my life. At the beginning of the journey I really didn’t know how I could move forward. Thank you for the… professional way you turned my life around. Due to [your team] I am facing each day with a positive smile!”

“Thank you so much to you and the dedicated team at the Tax Clinic for helping me with these outstanding returns. It has been a very stressful time and I’m very relieved to be able to put this all behind me and to be able to move forward.”

“Thank you so much, sorry for the delay I have just got out of family court now this is such a huge relief ! I really don’t think people understand the magnitude of offering this assistance to people in hardship & situations where financial abuse is a factor. I can’t explain what a weight has been lifted by having these completed –something that I should be capable of figuring out myself but at this time in my life simply unable to cope with ! So Thankyou again so much it really has made a difference to my life & my children’s lives.”

“Before I contacted the Tax Clinic I felt like the world was spinning in the wrong direction and my anxiety was through the roof. After they helped me I’m so thankful and grateful.”

Small business tax issues workshop

Described as “a very valuable learning opportunity for the sector” (Director Quality & Innovation at Financial Counselling Australia) UNSW Tax Clinic presented inaugural tax training workshop to the nation-wide sector of financial counsellors. Around a third of the 900-strong sector registered to attend.

Our Community Education and Outreach Activities

Our Research

Our growing research agenda illuminates the often compounding consequences particularly for – but not limited to – already marginalised groups. This includes severe financial distress, as well as poor mental health outcomes, which compounds existing marginalisation.

Our research and clinic experience has also shown that financial distress and a lack of tax/accounting literacy is not limited to socio-economically disadvantaged groups, but that a broad cohort of society can struggle with tax compliance.

UNSW Tax Clinic is fully integrated into the financial counselling sector, working closely with Financial Counselling Australia and the Financial Counsellors’ Association of NSW Inc. Research collaboration and cross-referrals with service delivery partners indicate significant and intersecting areas of marginalisation for vulnerable groups, and a need for social welfare and social justice services to continue communicating around how best to support clients at multiple levels. This is a dynamic and effective approach to social welfare and justice.

Our research has also shown that First Nations Australians are systematically and structurally disadvantaged, resulting in over-represented numbers attending our clinic as clients.

Our research focusses on evidence-based reform proposals that improve outcomes for financially vulnerable individuals and their families while being cognisant of political, socio-economic, legal design and administrative issues.

Journals

  - This article explores and extends the international literature on pro bono tax clinics by: (1) conducting an international comparative analysis of the pro bono tax clinic experiences of Australia, United States, United Kingdom and Canada; and (2) developing an evidence-based evaluation framework (the Tax Clinics Program Logic) for a nation-wide university-based pro bono tax clinic program. As illustrated in the Tax Clinics Program Logic, the ultimate benefit of tax clinics is in creating a more socially just tax system.

  - This article provides an outline of UNSW Tax Clinic’s pilot year operations and highlights the importance of adopting an interprofessional collaborative approach which offers vulnerable taxpayers – who meet criteria that are both transparent and nuanced – the ability to obtain free tax advice and support.

- Kevin O’Rourke, Ann Kayis-Kumar and Michael Walpole, ‘Serious Hardship Relief: In Need of a Serious Rethink?’ in Sydney Law Review (forthcoming)
  - These findings were presented at Federal Parliament to the Standing Committee on Tax and Revenue. This article found that of the 34 serious hardship cases in the past 50 years, all but four were decided in favour of the Commissioner. We proposed legislation be amended to allow serious hardship relief for other taxation liabilities (including GST) and for small businesses (whether operating as sole traders or through corporate or trust entities). This reform would modernise this element of the tax law to reflect the shifting parameters of the labour market (including the increasing use of Australian Business Numbers among taxpayers in precarious employment).
