Have you been discriminated against?

Sexual Harassment and Discrimination Legal Service

The Sexual Harassment and Discrimination Legal Service is a specialist NSW service of Kingsford Legal Centre (KLC). KLC is a community legal centre that gives free legal advice and casework assistance to people who have experienced discrimination and live in New South Wales.

We can also provide free legal education sessions to organisations and community groups.

What is discrimination?

Discrimination happens when someone treats you unfairly in an area of public life because of:

- > Your gender
- > Your race
- > Your sexuality
- > Your disability
- > Pregnancy
- > Caring or family responsibilities
- > Transgender status
- > Your age

Discrimination law is complex and covers lots of characteristics. Not all unfair treatment is discrimination.

How can KLC help?

- > We can give you free legal advice about discrimination law.
- > We can advise you on your options including how to make a complaint.

If you think you have been discriminated against it's a good idea to get legal advice to work out what you should do about it.

Advice is free.

Interpreters are also free

All our advice is confidential.

We can give you advice over the telephone if you live too far away to come into the Centre.
