1. Introduction

1.1 What is grey literature?

Grey literature is material that is not formally published by commercial publishers or peer reviewed journals and is produced by institutions, academics, organisations, and government agencies (Auger, 1998). It includes reports, unpublished data, conference proceedings, dissertations, policy and other documents and personal correspondence (Hopewell et al., 2007).

The advancement of the internet has made grey literature easily accessible electronically (e.g. PDF files and online data tables). Many organisations, institutions and agencies make grey literature available on their websites.

There are also several grey literature databases which can be searched for references of data sources. Authors are often willing to provide the document of interest upon request if the source is unavailable online.

1.2 Why use grey literature?

Peer reviewed literature and grey literature sources operate in relatively separate spheres with unique information in each (Christensen et al., 2008). It is sometimes imperative to supplement information from peer reviewed literature with the information rich grey literature sources. Grey literature provides additional information not or not yet available in peer reviewed literature due to publication lag and publication bias.

2. Methodology

2.1 Searching for grey literature

The previous technical report 'Searching the grey literature to access research on illicit drug use, HIV and viral hepatitis: an update' was used as a starting resource (Tran et. al., 2020). Every website linked was searched using the 'control find' or search function. The following search terms were used and, if applicable, were translated into the national language of the country before searching. The first page of results was interrogated to determine whether relevant reports/data/documentation were available on the prison population. This was noted in an excel spreadsheet, including the term that was used to find the information.

Search terms: prison criminal justice jail correctional detention incarcerated incarceration rate incarceration

2.2 National Criminal Justice Organisations/Governing Bodies

The World Prison Brief website was referred to as a source for each country's criminal justice websites (CJW) (World Prison Brief, n.d.).

If no CJW was noted, a country search was performed using the advanced search function on google. The country was chosen from the region section and in the 'any of these words' section, the terms in section 2.1 were used. The first page of results was interrogated to find the country's CJW. If there was no CJW found, the country's broader government body website was used. This was noted down in an excel spreadsheet.

The CJW (or government website) was copied into the 'site or 'domain section' of the advanced search function on google. In the 'any of these words' section, the following string of words were added (if the website was not in English, these words were first translated into the national language before pasting). The first page of results were interrogated to find any relevant prison information. This was noted in an excel spreadsheet.

Search terms:

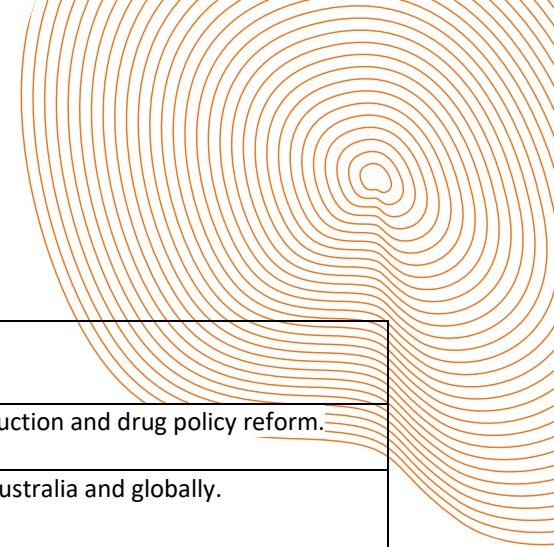

hiv hepatitis hcv hbv bbv inject needle nsp intravenous pwid condom opioid methamphetamine stimulant amphetamine methadone buprenorphine ost transgender msm naloxone
